

Our Valentine's Card is 12 pages total, which makes it more like a booklet. The front and back (the first 2 and last 2 pages) should be printed in color and the inside pages in black and white on a pastel pink paper, or whichever color is available in your area that compliments the card.

You can personalize the card in the below areas:

On the front:

You can put the name of the person to whom you are giving the card.

Change/add the date

On the second to last page

Change the name again to whom you are giving the card

Change the person's name again to whom is giving the card

After you have completed your purchase, you will be able to download and personalize the card. If you are having trouble with the personalization, then you should take the file to your local print/graphic design shop to have them do it for you. While you are there you can have them do the printing. Tell them to print "actual size" and trim the white edges off the first and last color pages. It will need to be printed double-sided with the first two and last two pages laminated. Have them print the inside pages double-sided in black and white on pastel pink paper, or whichever color is available to compliment the card. You will then need it to be coil/spiral bound together with a clear coil (if they don't have clear then ask for a color that will complement the card). The cost for all the printing will depend on the print shop you are using. We have used Office Depot/OfficeMax and our cost was roughly $15. So, with the cost of the download and the printing, our cost was about $22-$25 total. Again, check with your local print/graphics shop for their pricing before ordering from us.

Does the above sound difficult and does it take a long time to do? Not at all! After purchasing and downloading your card from us, simply take to your local print/graphics design shop and have an experienced print/graphics design person make the card for you. Drop off the information and if the print/graphics design shop has any questions they can reference our website. Should the print/graphics design shop have any further questions please have them contact us through our website email.
